

Legal Assistant/ Paralegal PROGRAM

Blackstone Career Institute's distance learning programs enable you to learn a new career at your own pace without disrupting your present job or lifestyle. Upon completion, you will have a Legal Assistant/Paralegal diploma, along with the skills and confidence necessary to obtain employment in one of the fastest growing career fields.

The Job of the Future

Entry-level paralegal jobs remain in demand! Across the nation, attorneys are looking for ways to reduce their expenses, so the need for trained paralegals who understand the legal system, tort law, litigation process, contracts, and legal research will continue to grow. The U.S. Department of Labor, predicts a growth rate of 8 percent through 2024.

Why Choose Legal Assistant/Paralegal

The Career

Paralegal, legal assistant and lawyer's assistant are all terms used to describe an individual who has substantial responsibility within the legal community. This is a challenging career for those interested in doing research, drafting legal documents, working with clients, and assisting in trial preparation.

Job Opportunities¹

The demand for paralegals and legal assistants is increasing as firms try to reduce costs and improve efficiency by hiring paralegals to do tasks once done by lawyers. More than 70 percent of paralegals work for private law firms. The remaining paralegals are primarily employed in corporate legal departments (including banks, insurance companies and other businesses) or by the government. Paralegals also find work in legal service/legal aid offices, special interest groups or associations, criminal law offices, and service companies/consulting firms. Some paralegals work in related fields, as law librarians, teachers, or elected officials. Still others work for themselves as freelance or independent paralegals.

Employment Outlook

Choosing to become a paralegal opens up a wide range of employment opportunities at private law firms, large corporations, insurance companies, and government agencies. Some paralegals choose to work in community legal aid offices, helping to bring legal services to those who wouldn't normally have access to such help.

A steadily increasing need for paralegals in the private sector as well as in various government offices means even when other elements of the economy slow down, the need for paralegals will continue to grow. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates employment for paralegals will grow up to 8% by 2024.

What You Can Earn

You can expect to earn an attractive salary when you become a paralegal. According to the 2015-2016 Occupational Outlook Handbook, top paralegal pay was over $79,010 in 2015, while the middle 50 percent of paralegals earned an average of $48,810.

Certification

Students who graduate from BCI's Legal Assistant/Paralegal program are eligible to sit for the Certified Legal Assistant/Certified Paralegal (CLA/CP) Exam administered through the National Association of Legal Assistants (NALA). Graduates will also meet the accredited business/legal course criteria needed to sit for the Accredited Legal Professional (ALP) exam and/or the Professional Paralegal (PP) certification, given by NALS...the association for legal professionals. Obtaining this professional standard signifies a paralegal's capability of providing superior services to employers.
